

Appendix 1 – Template Units

Right chaps, lets put some organisation into the motley lot you're calling an army! The following tables list the statistics and point costs for template units in Thud and Blunder. Try to make your Orders of battle conform to the following guides;

- Small armies;
  - Can have a maximum of two brigades.
  - May field a maximum of two tiny units and two small units. All other units must be of standard size.
  - Can contain a maximum of one artillery unit, and one cavalry unit.
  - Must include a small baggage unit, unless not required by the scenario.

- Standard armies:
  - Can have a maximum of four brigades.
  - May field a maximum of one tiny, two small and one large units. All other units must be of standard size.
  - Can contain a maximum of three artillery units and three cavalry units.
  - Must include a standard size baggage unit, unless not required by the scenario.

- Large armies:
  - Can have a maximum of six brigades.
  - May field up to a maximum of one tiny, two small and two large units. All other units must be of standard size.
  - Can contain a maximum of four artillery units and four cavalry units.
  - Must include a large baggage unit, unless not required by the scenario.

- All Units
  - Where listed as both Cavalry and Infantry (Mounted Infantry and Camel Corp for example) the highest points value should be paid, regardless of how the unit is deployed.

- Mahdi Armies
  - As a guide, for every 6 infantry units, a Mahdi army can field:
    - 3 rifle armed or Jehardi units
    - 1 Cavalry unit
    - 1 Artillery unit
    - 2 Skirmisher units

- Command Costs
  - General's command can be rated at the following points costs.

Command rating 6	50 points
Command rating 7	70 points
Command rating 8	90 points
Command rating 9	100 points
  - Maximum of 2 generals with rating greater than 8.

Notes:

Egyptian infantry quality varied greatly, the best troops (1st Army) were mostly kept back in Egypt and the poorer quality garrison troops and reluctant Gendarmes did most of the fighting. British forces are armed with Martini-Henry rifles, Egyptians with Remington rifles.

Notes:

Although much credit is paid to the fanatical bravery of the Ansar, many of their number were made up of allied tribes brow-beaten by the Mullahs, and captured and impressed Sudanese and Egyptian troops; therefore, units of varying quality have been provided. The Ansar riflemen were almost solely equipped with captured Egyptian Remington rifles. Hamitic Arabs dwelt in the north, and Negroes to the south. The northern tribes included the Beja around Suakim, Hadendowah (the famous Fuzzy-Wuzzies, Ababdeha in the north and Bisharin south of Wadi Halfa, Dababish north of Debba and Hssaniyeh and Shaguyeh near Khartoum. Baggara were to the south of Khartoum and the Amara near Abu Hamed.
